School Board Approves 1974-75 Organization

school in Appomattox and classes for these students will be held at the Memorial United Methodist Church. One teacher and one aide will come from Lynchburg to conduct these classes that were scheduled to begin on Monday, November 12th.

The LAARC school is operated entirely separately from the public schools in Appomattox County and the only expense to the County will be the transportation of the pupils from the school bus shop to the church and back in the afternoon. This will be quite an improvement over the necessity of transporting these students from Appomattox to Lynchburg.

Frank Chuchek, Administrative Assistant, reported to the board that the work on the new high school is on schedule and is moving right along. It is beginning to look like a school on the inside at this time. He reported that the grading would be completed on Saturday, November 10th, and that seeding would most likely begin on Monday of this week.

Members of the school board voted to request that the portion of the Appomattox Primary School now in Appomattox County be annexed into the Town of Appomattox. At present time the town/county line goes through the middle of the school and the board members felt it would be best to request that the Town of Appomattox annex that portion that is in the county so that the entire property would be in the Town of Appomattox.

RECIPE

By Sarah Anne Sheridan

Here is an easily prepared recipe for that universally appealing meat--chicken. It's also an excellent one-dish meal in these days of higher meat prices.

Chicken and Dumplings

5 pound chicken
1/8 t pepper
2 t salt
Few stalks of celery

Cut chicken in pieces and cover with boiling water. Add celery. Reduce heat and cook slowly until tender, about 2 to 2½ hours. Add salt after 45 minutes of cooking. Let stand until fat collects on top. Remove most of fat with a spoon. Take out chicken and remove skin and bones. Heat stock to boiling point. Add dumplings.

Dumplings

1½ c flour
1 t salt
2 t baking powder
¾ c milk

Sift flour, salt and baking powder together. Add milk gradually. Beat until smooth. Drop into hot stock by tablespoons. Cover closely. Cook for 15 minutes. Spoon dumplings and remaining liquid over chicken which has been arranged on a serving platter.

Tough Talk Misplaced

In an unnecessary and unfortunate lapse, Treasury Secretary George Shultz remarked recently, in Tokyo, that U.S. policy of developing its own oil reserves had taken some of the "swagger" out of oil producing nations in the Middle East.

Shultz was compounding an earlier, questionable statement by President Nixon, in a news conference. The President has said Arab nations could lose their western markets if they used their oil as a political weapon.

Both these statements are hollow. Anyone who knows the true picture of the world's oil supply and rising consumption knows the Arab countries will be able to choose their customers from now on, and that even huge Arab supplies of oil will not be able to meet world needs of the future.

In short, every barrel of international oil available today must come from the Middle East. U.S. production cannot meet domestic demand, and demand is rising. To bluff may be desirable in some cases but Arab leaders and oil experts know without any doubt they have what many nations of the world, not just the U.S., want, and need, urgently.

Such bluster by Shultz makes it very difficult for remaining American friends in the Middle East, notably King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, to resist rising pressure from the majority of Arab states to limit oil exports to the United States because of our pro-Israeli policy. Such talk alienates and undercuts our friends, while failing to impress militant Arabs aligned against us.

Veterans for it be recognized forth Monday in s the Federal has ordained, or an ill, as is the case in o honors the dead, day we pay tribute as well.

et said there is no s the United States remained untouched d's wars. While it proved, statistics this up. In the two of our existence, 38 and women have country in war, e of them are alive enty-seven million ial is some 13 per r population, and e entire population ger at the middle of mory. It is very near ion of Virginia and nest neighbors. ics have a limited illions are difficult ed. Who, exactly, an veteran? er plumber, or your rist, baker, carpenter, the list goes f the alphabet. And embered, too, the e your mother. ms is the man or o lives next door, n men who built the or door - carpenter, plumber. He is the bank who handled ng and the driver of which brought the materials to the site.

The veteran may be the nurse who tends your needs at the hospital, or the secretary who works across the hall.

The veteran is all these things because he or she has always been a citizen-soldier. From the time when each home had a musket hanging over the fireplace, right up to the present-day, the American soldier has been first the American citizen, then a defender under arms. Duty has always been more than a word to these people. It is a solemn responsibility, not to be shirked, but to be met four-square and unflinching.

The Old Dominion has contributed its share to the ranks of those called veterans. More than 91,000 served in the First World War, and 324,000 in World War II. The Korean War saw 139,000 Virginians answer their country's call, and in the 12 long years of the Vietnam Conflict, some 158,000 served.

Strangely enough, the American veteran served his non-veteran relative and friend in yet another way - a way we seldom consider, but which has been very tangible.

In recognition of a grateful nation's obligation to those who had served, veterans' hospitals have been established throughout the land. And in these hospitals some of the most painstaking medical research has borne fruit, and dramatic advances have been made in the treatment of the sick and the injured.

At the end of World War II, a paraplegic had a life-expectancy of five years. Today, a person who may be similarly injured - whether in battle or an automobile accident - can expect to live as long as his unscarred neighbor, thanks to the work with veterans.

The heart pacer, which has kept men and women alive and productive, was developed first for the veteran, and the portable respirator which has provided a degree of mobility for those earlier consigned to the iron lung, was developed at McGuire Hospital, in Richmond. Burn victims, too, have benefited from new treatment and skin-grafting techniques developed after World War II.

Thus in another sense - in a realm we seldom consider - we owe the wounded veteran a debt of gratitude.

As these newsletters are prepared, every effort is made not to over-use words, to seek another word or phrase to convey a meaning already expressed. There is no substitute for a phrase used repeatedly today...The American veteran is the American veteran. No accolade, no elegant phrase, will add to the unadorned tribute implied in the words.

This would be a wonderful world, with millions of nice people, if men and women would learn to mind their own business.

Pampered children, who get everything they want, develop into adults who want nothing that requires effort.
